HSA Bank Eliminates Two Fees as Banking Industry Fees Soar

WATERBURY, Conn., December 1, 2009 – Today’s news is plastered with Congress discussing the rapidly rising fees in the banking industry. Despite many banks increasing fees, HSA Bank® announced today that it eliminated the set up fee and debit card renewal fee for its health savings accounts (HSAs).

“We eliminated the debit card renewal fee because we recognize debit cards are the most convenient way for our accountholders to make point-of-service transactions,” said Dean Mason, CEO of HSA Bank. “We want to make it easy for people to have and use their debit card.”

By eliminating the set up and debit card renewal fees, HSA Bank addressed the top two customer concerns as identified in its annual Consumer Benchmark Survey.

“We listen to what our customers want and need out of their HSA administrator,” said Mason. “Eliminating the set up and debit card renewal fees is just the latest instance where we directly address our customer’s concerns.”
